

THE INDIAN

ESTABLISHED 1823.

INDIANAPOLIS, WEDNESDAY MORNING, JULY 2, 1896.

PRICE 5 CENTS. (AT RAILWAY NEWS STANDS, ON SUNDAYS 5 CENTS.)

"Get Off the Earth!"

The greatest puzzle mystery of the age. Thirteen Chinamen one minute—twelve the next, and no one knows where the odd one goes. You see it—know it—do it yourself, and can't tell how. See the big puzzle clock in our window.

We give the puzzles away to all who ask for one. They're more fun than a circus, and as mysterious as Hermann himself.

IF THE EARTH'S TOO HOT for you, we can help you make it cooler, with our—

$6 and $6.50 Drap'd Ete Coats and Vests.....$3.95
$7, $7.50 and $8 Drap'd Ete Coats and Vests.....$4.95

The When

A ballot in the pony contest with every purchase.

Grain Bags! Grain Bags!!

We have in stock for prompt delivery One Thousand Bales Grain Bags. We are selling agents in this territory for the Tennessee Manufacturing Co., Nashville, Tenn., manufacturers of the "Nashville," "Rock City," "Grocers A," "Cumberland," "Triumph," "Tioga." Prices are extremely low. Samples and quotations, if requested. Mail and telegraph orders will have prompt attention.

MURPHY, HIBBEN & CO.

Importers, Jobbers,
DRY GOODS, NOTIONS, WOOLENS, ETC.
(Wholesale Exclusively.)

Watch Out

When you buy your ice box and see that it is an ICE SAVER. We have the most reliable box on the market.

The Gurney {Patented} Refrigerator

All sizes and styles on hand.

INDIANAPOLIS STOVE CO., 71 and 73 South Meridian St.

BIG FOUR and C. & O. ROUTE

National Convention

Y. P. S. C. E. Fourth of July

Washington, D. C.
JULY 7 to 13.

THE SCENIC ROUTE

Through trains run as follows:

Leave Washington..... 11:25 pm 11:25 pm
Arrive Indianapolis..... 11:25 am 11:25 am
On Tuesday, July 2, a special train will leave Washington at 11:25 p.m., stopping at White Sulphur Springs for breakfast the next morning, and reaching Washington about noon. This is a fine train for those who desire to see the country en route.

For tickets and sleeping-car accommodations call at the Big Four ticket office, 200 Washington street, 25 Jackson place and Union Station, or communicate with the undersigned. Those living at points on other lines should be careful to have their tickets read via the Big Four and C. & O. route.

H. M. BRONSON, A. G. P. A.

THE C., H. & D. RY.

B. P. O. E. OFFICIAL ROUTE

Cincinnati Convention

Indianapolis Lodge of Elks, No. 13

Will leave in special coaches 8:50 a. m., JULY 7.

$3.50 Round Trip

Tickets can be had from members, and at 2 West Washington street. All are cordially invited.

The Monon Route

L. N. & C. R. Y.

Democratic Convention

AT CHICAGO

On JULY 3, 4, 5 and 6

All good to return until July 12 at Half Fare.

Three daily trains leave Indianapolis, 7 a. m., 3:30 p. m., 11:25 p. m., and arrive at Washington at 7 a. m., 3:30 p. m., 11:25 p. m., respectively. The maximum penalty is ten years. One year is taken off on account of the confession they made.

CAMPBELL, WILD & CO.,
205 TRUST BUILDING.

The Indianapolis Warehouse Co.

Warehousesmen, Forwarding and Commission Merchants.

DETERMINED TO RULE

DEMOCRATIC SILVERITES ARE MASTERS OF THE SITUATION.

And Are Firm in Their Insistence that the National Committee Shall Bend to Their Will.

NO GOLD MAN CAN PRESIDE

TEMPORARY CHAIRMAN OF CONVENTION MUST BE FOR SILVER.

Senator Harris, of Tennessee, Likely to Be Chosen if the Bimetallite Committee Has Its Way.

TWO-THIRDS RULE OPPOSED

ITS ABRIGATION TO BE DEMANDED BY ILLINOIS DELEGATES.

Denounced as a Curse by Gov. Altgeld—Possible Action of Committee in Regard to Contested Seats.

CHICAGO, June 30.—The committee appointed by the Democratic bimetallic committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, met this morning at the Palmer House to-morrow. Chairman Harris is expected to arrive during the forenoon and to call the executive committee together soon after his arrival. Other members of the national organization have assured the silver committee that they will be recovered soon after the executive committee is called together. Members of the executive committee with whom the silver men conferred to-day assured them that no steps had been taken looking to the selection of temporary officers. "This has had the effect of causing the members of the bimetallic organization to feel that possibly their apprehensions were unfounded, and to conclude that probably there will be no effort at snap judgment. They will, however, make their call and present a statement of the action of the bimetallic committee, and ask the committee to select a temporary president, and to select a temporary chairman. If the question is not granted they will report to their full committee, and the full committee will proceed to select a man for the place, and prepare for his election at the outset of the convention in the face of a contrary nomination by the national committee. This course will not, however, be adopted without full warning to the national committee in case such warning appears to be necessary. Also, in the event that the national committee consents to the suggestion, the silver men will proceed to the question of who shall be selected to fill the place. It is even possible that they would attempt to compromise that would allow the national committee to make its own selection of a presiding officer in case they agree to take a silver man, and to submit the name to the bimetallic committee before announcing the result.

The silver men are very determined on the point of not being thwarted in this matter, and are giving their entire attention to it. They will tell the national committee very plainly that the only way to avoid a clash in the convention, and for the national committee to avoid being ridiculed, is for it to accede to the wishes of the silver men. They will also assert that it will have to be made apparent from the beginning that it is to be a silver convention, and that this can be demonstrated in no way so clearly as in the selection of a temporary presiding officer.

The silver men have given very little attention to the question of who shall be selected to preside, but speculation turns more freely to Senator Harris, of Tennessee. It is suggested that the task may be quite arduous for one of Senator Harris's advanced age, but his great experience and parliamentary ability, as well as his popularity in the country, will render him a formidable candidate. It is a desire for the honor. The name of Governor Hogg, of Texas, is also mentioned in connection with the selection.

BIMETALLIC COMMITTEE.

IT WILL CONCEDE NOTHING TO THE GOLD-Standard Delegates.

CHICAGO, June 30.—The conference of the members of the Democratic national bimetallic committee was called to order at the Sherman House a few minutes past 12 o'clock to-day by Senator Harris, of Tennessee, who is chairman of the organization. There was present a quorum of members of the committee and a large number of distinguished silver Democrats, including Senators Harris and Tate, of Tennessee; Jones, of Arkansas; Turpie, of Indiana; Daniel, of Virginia, and Cockrell, of Missouri; ex-Senator Martin, of Kansas; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

There was more or less individual discussion of Mr. Whitney's attitude among the delegates, and it was noted that there was no expression on the part of anyone favorable to yielding anything to the gold-standard element. The opinion of the gathering was that the silver forces would have a characteristic remark by Senator Harris, "I am," the Senator said, "one of many thousands of Democrats and of many thousands of delegates. I can't, of course, speak for all, but I can speak for myself. I want no compromise. We should either have a declaration for free coinage of silver on terms of equality with gold at the ratio of 16 to 1, so plain that no human being can misunderstand it, or we should have an equally plain pronouncement for the gold standard, and I think I know which I prefer."

The formal proceedings consisted in the appointment of a committee to confer with the executive committee of the national Democratic committee, consisting of Senator W. J. Stone, of Missouri; Senator Daniel, of Virginia; Governor Stone, of Missouri; Congressman McMillin and Richardson, of Tennessee; ex-Congressman Bryan, of Nebraska, and Snodgrass, of Tennessee, besides others. The first meeting was devoted largely to introductions and the exchange of views as to the outlook for the approaching convention. The opinion was generally expressed that there would be no question as to the absolute control of the convention by the silver forces, to which it was generally added a determination to see that nothing happened to in any way weaken the control.

TURPIE AT CHICAGO

THE SENATOR BOOSTS THE MATTHEWS PRESIDENTIAL BOOM.

He Tells a Reporter that the Governor Is the Most Available Man, and that He Is "Safe" as to Money.

TELLERITES NOT AGGRESSIVE

WAITING TO SEE HOW THE WIND BLOWS BEFORE BEGINNING WORK.

Congressman Shafroth's Reasons for Thinking Democracy Should Indorse the Colorado Man.

POSTMASTER HESING'S FEARS

Views with Alarm the MOUTHINGS OF ALTGELD AND TILLMAN.

Mr. Hinrichsen Predicts a 16-to-1 Candidate and Platform and Utters Doubt of the Gold Forces.

CHICAGO, June 29.—Senator Turpie, of Indiana, is among the most distinguished arrivals. He comes to attend the National Democratic convention, to which he is a delegate. "I am here," he said, "in the interest of Governor Matthews for the presidential nomination, as are all our Indiana delegates. We think him the most available, and, when all things are considered, the most acceptable man whose name will be presented to the convention. He is a man of excellent attainments, and I feel confident that he will carry the country to all parts of the country. We have nothing to say against other candidates, but we claim for our man that he has always been a Democrat and that he is absolutely safe on the financial question. We believe he will command greater strength at the polls than will any other aspirant."

The Senator expressed the opinion that the convention would declare unequivocally for the free coinage of silver and would submit to no compromise proposition. On the tariff, he said: "Have you read our Indiana platform? We declare that with the free mintage of silver, our present tariff law will produce all the revenue necessary to run the government. We stand by this declaration."

PLANS OF TELLERITES.

No Aggressive Campaign to Be Made—Shafroth's Plea for the Senator.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.

CHICAGO, June 30.—Delegates to the convention who have arrived generally appear averse to discussing the program of the meeting. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work. They are waiting to see how the wind blows before beginning work.